(A) The Execution of Kurt Steiner

--- Neil Chapman

scene 14 Sometimes the Sea King can be spotted flying low, following the coast on a training exercise. Walkers are lucky and find themselves close to the spot where it comes to hover. As it rotates its position carefully to face the mid-afternoon sun it shows one flank and its open door, a dark interior, two men wearing helmets preparing to descend on a rope into a weather system made by the aircraft's own blades.
